Partial Amendment No.1 to SR-NASDAQ-2014-004

The NASDAQ Stock Market LLC (“NASDAQ”) is filing this Partial Amendment No. 1 to SR-NASDAQ-2014-004 to make the following three changes to the pending 19b-4 and Exhibit 1:

1. Additional Tie-Breaker. In the original filing, NASDAQ failed to describe the fourth and final tie-breaker for selecting the execution price of the Limit Up Limit Down Closing Cross (“LULD Cross”). The filing properly described the first three criteria:

- (A) The Nasdaq Closing Cross will occur at the price that maximizes the number of shares of Eligible Interest in the Nasdaq Market Center to be executed;
- (B) If more than one price exists under subparagraph (A), the Nasdaq Closing Cross shall occur at the price that minimizes any Imbalance;
- (C) If more than one price exists under subparagraph (B), the Nasdaq Closing Cross shall occur at the entered price at which shares will remain unexecuted in the cross.

The filing should also have described a fourth tie-breaker taken from the methodology currently set forth in NASDAQ Rule 4753 governing the NASDAQ Halt Cross:

- (D) If more than one price exists under subparagraph (C), the Nasdaq Closing Cross shall occur at:
 - In the case where a security has already traded during normal market hours on that trading day, the price that is closest to the last Nasdaq execution prior to the LULD pause;
 - In the case where a security has not already traded during normal market hours on that trading day, the price that is closest to the previous NASDAQ Official Closing Price.

NASDAQ believes that the fourth tie-breaker will be used only rarely. However, when it is used, the final tie-breaker must be based on a fixed reference price such as the last transaction report from that day or, in the absence of trades that day, from the previous day on which trading occurred. A fixed tie-breaker is superior to a floating one, such as a midpoint or an NBBO, when there is no continuous market just prior to the execution of a cross, as is the case prior to any halt.

2. Treatment of Imbalance Only (“IO”) Orders. In the original filing, NASDAQ described the treatment of IO Orders after the system determines the execution price of the LULD Closing Cross. However, NASDAQ neglected to describe their treatment prior to that determination, and their impact on the execution price. Specifically, in the case of an LULD pause just prior to the close of trading, prior to the determination of the execution price, IO Orders entered prior to the LULD Closing Cross will be re-priced to one penny above the LULD band price (for sell IOs) or one penny below the LULD price band (for buy IOs) or to the entered price if it is less aggressive than the LULD price band at the time of the LULD Trading Pause.

Currently, IO Orders do not participate in halt crosses – they are only accepted for the opening and closing crosses. However, since the LULD Closing Cross is a hybrid of the Halt and Closing Cross, IO orders are inevitably part of the auction process. IO orders in the normal Closing Cross aid in the price discovery process and serve to support stability by offsetting imbalances. The purpose of IO orders in the LULD Closing Cross will be no different and in a time of greater market volatility, as one would expect when the market is in a LULD pause, IO orders become all the more important as a stabilizing mechanism.

In the standard closing cross, IO orders are re-priced to a reference price that is the NASDAQ best bid for buys or the NASDAQ best offer for sells. Without a bid or offer based on continuous trading due to the LULD pause status of the market, the LULD band price becomes a substitute reference price for the LULD Closing Cross IO Orders.

Additionally, buy and sell IO orders are not meant to trade against each other or cause imbalances and thus the IO orders in a LULD Closing Cross will be re-priced to $0.01 below the LULD band for buys and $0.01 above the LULD band for sells.

Due to the likelihood of increased volatility after an LULD pause and the importance of orderly trading at the close, NASDAQ has determined to treat IO Orders differently in this circumstance. NASDAQ believes that this treatment of IO Orders is appropriate and beneficial to investors and the market because, by definition, an LULD pause follows a period of unusual volatility and an LULD pause at the close of trading poses risks at a particularly important time of the trading day. Using the LULD band as the reference price upon which to base IO Order prices will foster stability in an otherwise unstable time in the market. NASDAQ considered various alternatives for the re-pricing of IO Orders, ranging from re-pricing at the LULD bands, at one penny away from those bands, and at multiple pennies away. NASDAQ believes that re-pricing at a penny away from the LULD bands properly balances the need for a buffer to protect investors from excessive volatility (which would militate towards a narrower banding) and the need for unfettered price discovery (which would push towards wider banding). This balance, in NASDAQ's view, is the best way to protect investors and maintain a fair and orderly market.

Once the system determines the correct execution price, IO Orders will be treated as described in the original filing:

Once the algorithm determines the proper closing price, the LULD Closing Cross will execute all orders at the determined price in strict price/time priority, rather than the complex priority currently set forth in NASDAQ Rule 4754(b)(3). Excess interest at the closing price will be available for execution against available imbalance only orders on the opposite side of the market. Aggressive IO orders opposite the side of the imbalance that were entered prior to other orders at exactly the crossing price will be re-priced to the crossing price and have priority over those orders. The LULD Closing Cross price will be the Nasdaq Official Closing Price for stocks that participate in the LULD Closing Cross (footnote omitted).

As stated in the original filing, once the algorithm determines the proper closing price, eligible IO orders priced more aggressively than the closing price will be re-priced to the closing price and sorted in time priority. Therefore, aggressive IO orders that were entered prior to other orders at exactly the crossing price will have priority over those orders. The LULD Closing Cross price will be the Nasdaq Official Closing Price for stocks that participate in the LULD Closing Cross.

3. Information Dissemination. NASDAQ proposes to change one aspect of the Net Order Imbalance Information (“NOII”) disseminated during an LULD Trading Pause just prior to the close. In the original filing NASDAQ stated that the NOII would “include Imbalance Size and Side information representing the share not currently paired at the reference price.” However, NASDAQ plans instead to disseminate an indicator for “market buy” or “market sell” if marketable buy or sell shares would remain unexecuted above or below the Near or Far Clearing Price for the expected LULD Closing Cross. This process is in line with what is currently done in the NASDAQ Halt and IPO Crosses.

As a result of this modification, the proposed rule language governing information dissemination must be modified slightly. Specifically, NASDAQ proposes to modify proposed Rule 4754(b)(6)(B) as follows:

NASDAQ shall continue disseminating the NOII every five seconds until the execution of the LULD Closing Cross or until 5:00 p.m. whichever is later. The Near Price, Far Price, and Reference Prices contained in the NOII will all represent the price at which the LULD Closing Cross would execute should the cross conclude at that time. [The NOII will also include Imbalance Size and Side information representing the shares not currently paired at the reference price.] If marketable buy (sell) shares would remain unexecuted above (below) the Near Clearing Price or Far Clearing Price. Nasdaq shall disseminate an indicator for "market buy" or "market sell".

This language conforms to the dissemination of indicative pricing information currently set forth in Rule 4753(a)(2)(E)(iii) and 4754(a)(7)(E)(ii) governing the NASDAQ Halt/IPO Cross and the NASDAQ Closing Cross.

4. Execution priority. NASDAQ wishes to clarify one additional matter set forth in the original rule filing. With regard to execution priority, that NASDAQ selected the time-based priority method currently employed in the case of a trading halt rather than the more complex method used in the case of a standard closing cross. NASDAQ chose this method for determining execution priority because it believes that trading behavior during an LULD Trading Pause immediately prior to the close of trading will more closely resemble behavior during a trading halt than trading just prior to the close. This is likely to be the case due to the absence of a continuous market during the LULD Trading Pause, as opposed to the presence of a continuous market just prior to the standard close of trading.

5. Entry of Market Orders. NASDAQ proposes to clarify that new market orders may be entered during an LULD Trading Pause, but only until 4:00pm. NASDAQ does not currently permit the entry of market orders after 4:00pm; only limit orders may be entered after 4:00pm. Therefore, if an LULD Trading Pause is extended beyond 4:00pm due to continuing volatility, entry of new market orders will be prohibited after 4:00pm. As a result, proposed Rule 4754(b)(6)(C)(iii) will be modified as follows:

(iii) During the pause and prior to 4:00pm, new market and limit orders of any order type and any time in force may be entered, modified, and cancelled and may participate in the LULD Closing Cross. After 4:00pm, entry of market orders is prohibited. New Imbalance Only Orders may also be entered and modified to increase shares represented, but can't be cancelled during the pause.

* * *

The proposed clarifications and modifications are minor and should have a small and beneficial impact on the operation of the proposed LULD Closing Cross. NASDAQ believes that none of the described changes is material to the operation of the proposed LULD Closing Cross. NASDAQ further believes that members will view these proposed changes as non-controversial.

Additionally, the Exchange believes the proposed rule change is consistent with Section 6(b) of the Act¹ in general, and furthers the objectives of Section 6(b)(5),² in particular, in that it is designed to promote just and equitable principles of trade, remove impediments to and perfect the mechanisms of a free and open market and a national market system and, in general, to protect investors and the public interest. The proposed amendments are consistent with this provision in that they will ensure that the Exchange continues to comply with the LULD Plan, and simultaneously provide for an effective pricing mechanism for the critical period of the market close. The proposed LULD Closing Cross is designed to balance the need for transparency and liquidity with the need to move quickly from a Trading Pause to a closing price. NASDAQ believes that it has accomplished these goals to the maximum extent possible.
